

Letter from the Editor

Dear Readers of the Polish Sociological Review,

Since January 2015, I have honor and pleasure to serve as an Editor-in-Chief of the Polish Sociological Review. I am very grateful to those of you who are continuously interested in our journal and in Polish sociology, as both the readers and the members of the past Editorial Board. Special gratitude has to be expressed to Joanna Kurczewska who led Polish Sociological Review for many years and devoted a lot of her time and effort to assure its high quality and good reputation.

My tasks will be to strengthen an international character of the journal and to maintain the balance between theoretical and empirical articles, while preferring those combining these two approaches. Presenting Polish sociology to foreign readers remains of course to be an important role of the PSR but foreign authors are cordially invited as well.

I strongly appeal to all of you not only to read our journal and to recommend it to students and colleagues, but also to submit your articles for publication. In order to increase the number of published empirical analyses, we indent to add a new section of “Research notes,” in which shorter and simpler articles could be published alongside full-bodied ones.

I would immensely appreciate your contribution as the authors and also your comments and suggestions concerning the journal in general as well as the particular articles published in it. The discussion articles will be especially welcome. We can together make Polish Sociological Review an interesting and good journal.

Krzysztof Zagórski

Warsaw, March 2015